Bethel selectmen opposed to added police protection

The Board of Selectmen, at the regular Monday night meeting, recommended disapproval of a proposed warrant article seeking additional funding to provide for additional police protection.

Prior to making their feelings on the issue known, the board members agreed to place two alternative police protection articles on a special town meeting warrant. One article repeats the language of a citizens' petition calling for doubled police protection at a cost of $22,000.

The second article—drafted because the board concluded it would be impossible to double the police protection for the amount stated—calls for adding $22,000 to the police budget and letting town officials decide how best to spend it. The selectmen felt the first article stood little chance of passage and therefore added the second article, which they felt would fairly represent the wishes of the petitioners.

The selectmen decided to recommend against passage of either article, however. The matter must still go to the Budget Committee for its recommendation before a special town meeting date is set. The latest date possible—in order to remain within the 60-day limit from the time the citizens' petition was accepted—would be Oct. 23.

The selectmen also indicated they would combine the matter of added police protection with the matter of asking approval for the revised Comprehensive Plan. Proponents of the move to increase funding for the police department had hoped to keep the two matters on separate warrants.

The selectmen made the following appointments to town committees:

- To the Planning Board: Karen Brown and John Laban.
- To the Recreation Committee: Rayne Cote and Nancy Murphy.

The board held closed-door interviews before making the appointments. The board declined to name three people to fill vacancies on the Community Safety and Law Enforcement Committee. Four continued on Page Three

Citizen wins awards at state newspaper meet

The Bethel Citizen won two awards at the annual conference of the Maine Press Association, held last weekend at Sugarloaf Resort.

Competing against 30 weekly papers, The Citizen took a third-place award in the category for large ads. The ad designed by the paper was for Stanley's Furniture, in Rumford.

The Citizen also won a third-place award in the Freedom of Information category for a successful case the paper filed against the U.S. Forest Service to gain access to information regarding the draft management plan for the White Mountain National Forest.

The best weekly paper in the state was judged to be the York County Coast Star, a weekly in Kennebunk, owned by the New York Times Co.

The best daily paper in the state was judged to be the Lewiston Sun.

ALTHOUGH HE'S SELLING OFF his dairy herd, West Paris farmer Ole Olson will still have his horse Nancy. The 18-year-old Belgian earned a number of prizes at the just-concluded Oxford County Fair. Mr. Olson says she's a good worker, especially when it comes to logging. "She enjoys it more than I do," the 71-year-old farmer says.

West Paris protests impending bank closing

West Paris residents and the West Paris town government are protesting the announced plan of Bethel Savings Bank to close its West Paris branch.

A group of concerned citizens will hold a public meeting tonight (Wednesday) at the fire station to discuss the bank's decision. Bank officials have said moving the branch to South Paris will allow the bank to provide better service for its West Paris customers.

Bill Gibson, of Stearns Hill Road, who organized tonight's meeting, is a member of the bank's advisory board and said he has received a lot of calls from people in town—"mostly older citizens of the town," he said. "It seemed that for their benefit it would be good to hold a meeting."

Town Treasurer Gwen Ellingwood has already withdrawn the $85,000 in town funds that had been at the local bank and moved them to another bank, according to Selectman Judy McLaughlin, who described the shifting of town funds as a protest against the impending closing of the branch.

Dairyman quitting; says prices too low

West Paris dairyman Ole Olson is getting out of the dairy business after 40 years. The High Street farmer says he hasn't missed a day in the cow barn since 1946. But the combination of low prices for his milk and high prices for the materials he has to purchase have convinced him it's time to get out.

"If I don't get out of it, they'll drive me out," he says.

For example: he'd like to purchase a new baler. The John Deere baler he bought 20 years ago for $1,800 is wearing out, but a new baler costs $3,000. If milk prices were going up at a commensurate rate, the inflationary increase in the price of farm machinery would be no problem. But, in fact, milk prices have been going down during recent years.

Mr. Olson receives a base price of 12½¢ dollars for every 100 pounds of milk he ships to his buyer—Agri-Mark, in Massachusetts. Because his Jersey herd produces a higher level of butterfat than average, he gets a bonus for the added butterfat content. (On the other hand, his Jerseys produce far less milk than the more common Holsteins.) Out of his gross earnings, farmer Olson must also pay for trucking his milk to Massachusetts. Then there are the normal production expenses of feed, wages, upkeep of machinery, fuel, electricity, overhead, veterinary bills, etc.

The 71-year-old Mr. Olson says he has to use part of his social security check to keep his dairy business going.

While he bristles under the economic squeeze, he is unwilling to join the smattering of farmers who are keeping their milk off the market to protest the low prices. (None of the half-dozen area dairymen have joined the sputtering nationwide protest.) Mr. Olson's solution is to just get right out of the business.

He has opted to take part in the federal government's whole herd buy-out plan. Under this plan, a farmer is given a cash settlement by the federal government if he sells his entire herd to the slaughterhouse. The idea is to cut back on production in order to change the supply-and-demand equation and drive up milk prices.

Boise gives on grievability; workers vote to return to jobs

Striking paperworkers of Local 900 of the UPIU last Sunday voted 2-1 to approve Boise Cascade's contract offer and end their strike against the Rumford mill. The strike had lasted 76 days.

The reconsideration of Boise's final contract offer came after two days of intense negotiations in Augusta. The talks there, spurred by Gov. Brennan and federal mediator John LaPoint, gave the union what it wanted on grievance procedures, thus softening the hard line the company had taken on its final offer.

Mr. LaPoint said afterwards: "The parties were vitally interested in putting an end to the agony."

The softening of the company's hard line came in a so-called "back-to-work agreement" that forms an addendum to the final contract offer. Under the back-to-work agreement, workers are granted the right to go through normal grievance procedures to protest an unfair reassignment under the flexible work assignment provisions of the new contract. Previously, the flexibility provisions had superseded the grievance provisions.

UPIU Vice President/Regional Director Eldon Hebert told The Citizen: "There was a change made in the grievance procedure, which they (Boise) had vowed not to change. If you had a dispute with the company (under the new contract) there was no place to go. This way here you can carry it to arbitration. That's the main change that took place." Company spokesman Gary Guimond admitted: "It [the back-to-work agreement] probably clarified the grievance procedure."

While winning their way on the grievance procedures, the union was not continued on Page Three

He's without a job after 35 years in mill

Kenneth Hoyt, of Bryant Pond, is a mild-mannered man. A member of Local 900 and an employee of Boise Cascade, he voted against going on strike when the question was put to vote in June. He was in the minority.

He had also voted against going out on strike in 1980. He was in the minority then, too.

Sunday he voted to ratify the company's contract offer. This time he was in the majority.

But when his fellow union members return to work later this week and next, Mr. Hoyt will not be among them. He was one of the 342 strikers whose jobs had been given to replacement workers.

"I didn't really expect it," he said. With 35 years in the mill, he held a senior position in the groundwood department, supervising the junior members of his crew. "You just can't replace that position with anyone," he said.

Nevertheless, that is what the company did, and now Mr. Hoyt waits, optimistically, hoping that he will get called up from the preferential hiring list for another position. He refuses to be angry at the company. "We should give it a few weeks," he said. But, he admits, "I was kind of disappointed."

EARLY SNOWFALL AT SKIWAY

The upper slopes at Sunday River Ski Resort were covered with snow Tuesday morning, according to Wende Gray, marketing director for the skiway.

Ms. Gray, who took a vehicle to the upper slopes, said she measured the snow to a depth of three inches. She said this is the first time to her knowledge to have a significant snowfall in September. Even an October snowfall is unusual, she said.

Greenstock dump to get newspaper re-cycling

Newspaper re-cycling is coming to the Greenstock transfer station. Presently, re-cycling at the transfer station is limited to glass bottles.

Woodstock Selectman Gary Wing reported to his fellow board members last night (Tuesday) that the joint transfer station board had approved the new re-cycling effort. He said he and fellow Selectman Clifford York would construct a shed to hold the newspapers for pickup.

The two towns would probably not receive any money for the old newspapers, he said. But re-cycling would mean that much less bulk in the dumpsters and that much less tonnage the towns would have to pay to haul to Norridgewock.

As for the problem of where to dump the town's septage, the selectmen were still looking at alternatives, most prominently the possibility of dumping it in South Paris' sewer plant.

At last night's selectmen meeting, it was also reported that Road Commissioner Ken Koskela was working to develop a turnaround at the stump dump. He is also in contact with the state as to what, if anything to do about the salt pile that drew the ire of the DEP last spring.

The battle's over—nobody won

Now that the 76-day battle at Boise Cascade is over, it's time to assess the damages.

• The company lost production. It's impossible to run a mill efficiently with most of the workforce gone.

• The company lost money. How much was lost company officials are not saying. But figure the company had to pay food, housing and salaries of workers from other mills, security forces from the south and the far west, a catering service from the south, plus contract electricians. Then there were the buses to get all the visitors to and from their lodgings. Then there was the enormous expense of the recruiting program to find new workers, with ads in papers throughout the state and in selected cities of the northeast and southwest, plus recruitment teams. Also figure lawyers' fees and overtime wages to the normally salaried employees.

• The company won grudging respect for its hard-line position on no-compromise, but lost a lot of friends in the process. The wounds caused by the company's hiring of replacement workers will likely take a generation to heal.

• The strikers were big losers. Not only did they lose 11 weeks of salaries—which normally run up to $1,000 a week—but 342 of them lost their jobs, replaced by new workers.

• The union was a big loser. By rushing to strike instead of giving in to the federal mediator's suggestion for extended negotiations, the union lost the moral high ground. By attacking everything in the contract, the union position appeared to be one of sheer obstructionism.

• The Town of Rumford was a big loser. Commercial activity was way off for most businesses in town, while the police ran up large overtime expenses. Merchants and banks both had to defer collection of time payments and loans. Landlords in many cases did not collect rents. In short, expenses went up while revenues went down. And families and friends saw relationships strained as strikers were pitted against those going into the mill.

Were there any winners in the battle? Not really. Both sides wanted to make a point. Both sides did. The partial destruction of a community and an enterprise, brought about from the insistence by both sides on making their points, is evident for all to see.

Was the battle necessary? No. Boise, having received preliminary union acceptance to most of the new contract, should have worked harder to achieve complete agreement. Instead, as soon as the union (foolishly) decided not to extend the bargaining period, Boise scrapped the tentative agreement that had been worked out and proposed a final offer that was almost impossible for the strikers to accept. (It should be noted that the six craft unions at Great Northern, in Millinocket, last weekend rejected a contract offer that was much better than the one Boise presented its workers. Great Northern and its unions will continue to negotiate.)

The union should not have walked away from the talks in late June. Having gone out on strike, the union should have realized that Boise was serious about wanting most of what it proposed in its final offer. Instead of criticizing every section of the proposed contract, the union should have attacked the portions that it absolutely could not live with, such as the lack of solid grievance procedures. The union finally did this in last week's talks in Augusta and won a concession from the company in the form of a back-to-work agreement that guarantees workers the right to raise a grievance against arbitrary job assignments.

It should not have taken 76 days to reach this agreement. Having arrived at the agreement, there is still the problem of learning how to work together again—management and labor. Each side can go into the mill still wanting to prove a point, or both sides can go in and admit that mistakes were made and it's now time to get back to the job of making paper. bfw

COMPUTERS ON ADULT AGENDA

The SAD #44 Adult and Community Education Program will offer several courses designed to increase familiarity with computers as part of the fall schedule of enrichment courses for adults. Telstar faculty members Linda Davis and Mike Delehanty will offer introductory courses on Monday evenings. Mrs. Davis' course—this is a Computer—will be a 3-session introduction to computers, and will provide an opportunity to become acquainted with the operation of a personal computer and the kind of tasks it performs. Mr. Delehanty will offer a 10-session course—Introduction to Computers—which is also designed for beginners, but will spend more time exploring word processing, data base, and spreadsheet functions than is possible in the shorter class.

Mrs. Davis and Mr. Delehanty will team up to present a recertification class for classroom teachers—Computers for the Teacher—which has been approved by the Department of Educational and Cultural Services for 3 recertification credits and will be held on Monday afternoons. This course will have special sessions on use of teacher utilities, the SAD #44 computer curriculum and state graduation requirements, LOGO, and a variety of software which is especially appropriate for classroom use. Following 10 weeks of classes this fall, teachers will be required to undertake an individual project during the winter, with the class to resume meeting in March for a follow-up session to share and evaluate projects.

Cathy Newell, director of Adult and Community Education, has planned for the availability of practice time for adults enrolled in computer classes with

Letters to the Editor

To the Editor:

This is really a letter to the young mothers of Newry. The Mothers' Club was formed many years ago. The mothers got together and wanted to do something for their children.

Now these mothers are in their 50 and 60 years or even older and their children are grown up and married and have children of their own. Don't you want to do something for your children?

The club needs young ideas and actions. This letter is a plea. Don't let the club fade out. It is too important to the next generation of youngsters in Newry. One evening a month is not too much to spend for your children's interests is it?

The club is a good response when it comes to give "goodies" for food sales etc. But we need some input in ideas and time also to keep the club going. The club (with its old members) will back you up in any reasonable ideas and programs in finances and time spent. This is a form of a membership drive, please respond

A note from the publisher

Put another feather in the cap of Bethel and in the cap of The Bethel Inn. The Maine Press Association board of directors has decided to hold the association's 1988 annual fall conference in Bethel, at The Bethel Inn.

This will be excellent free publicity for Bethel and the surrounding area. It will bring to our community over 200 newspaper people—the editors and publishers and reporters and advertising representatives and photographers of most of the newspapers in the state. When they go home after the conference and report on what took place and where—voilà, instant publicity. Dick Rasmussen and his staff deserve congratulations for making a convincing presentation to the association's board.

This year's conference of the Maine Press Association was held at Sugarloaf this past weekend. My wife Mary and I represented The Citizen.

We had never been to Sugarloaf and were impressed by its beauty. We were also impressed by the prices: condo townhouses for $250,000 and breakfast at the base lodge for $6. Greens fees at the championship golf course began at $15 midweek. Mary, who is the golfer in our family, wondered why a distant resort that wanted to attract people from far away to stay for a few days or a week to play golf would build a long and difficult and expensive course instead of one that would be less intimidating.

I don't know the answer, but I can report that there were only a handful of people on the course, which was grand and beautiful and big. Mary figured, with its long, narrow fairways, each hole of the course was good for a few lost balls.

We met a number of Sugarloaf regulars at the conference—families that had been coming to the mountain to ski ever since they could remember. These people said they didn't particularly like what was happening to their winter retreat—what with not enough snow and lots of development. But they hoped things would get better. (In fact there was a trace of snow on the slopes Sunday morning.) Being loyal Sugarloafers, the families we spoke with had still not been willing to try Sunday River or Mt. Abram. Maybe after the 1988 conference they'll change their minds.

The Citizen picked up two awards at the conference. Among the 30 competing weekly papers, The Citizen took a third place in the large-size ad category. The Citizen's winning entry was a full-page ad for Stanley's Furniture, produced by Karen Hakala, which appeared in the paper last December. (Karen, as most readers know, has since moved to the Lewiston paper.)

The Citizen also won third place in the Freedom of Information category. This was for the paper's successful efforts, through the Freedom of Information Act, to get the U.S. Forest Service to release statistics on the tabulation of comments on the management plan for the White Mountain National Forest.

Most of the awards went to the big weeklies along the coast. Among our neighbors, the Bridgton News did very

West Paris revaluation won't be reflected on this year's tax bills

The property revaluation being conducted by the West Paris assessors won't be completed in time for calculating this year's tax bills, according to Selectman Judy McLaughlin.

Tax bills will go out within a couple of weeks, she explained, and the revaluation process is still going on. "We never realized what a big job it would be," she said. "We gave it a good shot, but we're still not done."

Elderhostel programs at Sunday River Inn again

Sunday River Inn is hosting Elderhostel programs again this fall. During the opening session this week 30 Elderhostelers from throughout the United States are studying sheep raising and spinning with Sue Laban, stained glass art with Robin Fraser, and Indian cultures with Steve Keane and Eric Wight.

This year several Elderhostelers are combining a week of study at Sunday River Inn with visits to relatives in the area. The Elderhostel experience is one that more and more people are encouraging their parents to get involved in!

well, garnering a half-dozen awards, including a first place for community service for its excellent and extensive coverage of the nuclear dump issue.

The main speaker at the conference was Jim Pate, the president of the National Newspaper Association. Jim is publisher of the Madill (Oklahoma) Record and comes from a long line of printers and publishers. Commenting on the rapid changes taking place in newspaper production, Jim recalled the advice his father gave him years ago: "Learn to run the Linotype machine and you'll never be without a trade." That drew a big laugh from the audience, since Linotypes have almost universally given way to computerized typesetting.

Jim pointed out, however, that the advice given by publisher Horace Greeley was as good today as it was when he penned it 100 years ago at the beginning of the Linotype era. Better known for his advice to "Go West," Greeley also told fellow publishers: Be sure to print all the births and all the deaths. And be sure to make mention of every new enterprise in town and every addition to an existing enterprise. And also take note of the raising of a new barn or the sale of a farm.

This is still good advice, and most community newspapers take it to heart. We also try to keep track of school lunches, new teachers in the schools, student activities, who has won what sort of recognition, town government business, problems associated with growth, local budgets, and more. Here at The Citizen we're fortunate to have a loyal contingent of correspondents who keep us abreast of most of the local happenings. For much of the other news we rely on readers bringing in items that would otherwise not make it into the paper.

The annual conference of the Maine Press Association is a good time to see how other papers in the state are doing in serving their communities. From what I could see, they're mostly doing just fine.

BOISE GIVES ON GRIEVABILITY

able to budge Boise on its policy of replacing striking workers. The company has been replacing strikers for the past month-and-a-half and had hired 342 new workers prior to Sunday's acceptance of the new contract by the union membership.

UPIU Vice President Hebert admitted that it was the threat of further replacements, plus the threat of having 350 maintenance jobs contracted out that spurred Local 900 to accept the contract after Boise had given ground on grievance procedures.

Company spokesman Guimond said the former strikers will be brought back into the mill beginning today (Wednesday) for re-orientation. "By Sunday everybody should be back that's coming back." That meant, he said, the original union workforce of about 1,200, minus the 342 who were replaced during the strike.

Those who were replaced have been placed on a preferential hiring list, Mr. Guimond said, and they will be called in as vacancies occur.

With the union back in the mill, the 342 new workers will have to join the union within 30 days, according to the contract. If they don't, their employment will be terminated, Mr. Guimond said.

The idea of having replacement workers in the union is not very palatable to the former strikers—not the idea of working alongside them.

"It's going to be hell in there, I imagine," one returning union man told the Citizen. "There'll be a lot of hard feelings."

UPIU Vice President Hebert agreed there would be hard feelings, but thought most of the animosity would be directed towards the company. "There're going to be a lot of hard feelings, there's no question about it. They're a vicious company."

He compared the new contract offered by Boise with the new contract offered by Great Northern, in Millinocket. Great Northern also incorporates flexible work rules in their contract offer but doesn't insist on workers giving up special Sunday or vacation pay benefits nor remove the existing grievance procedures. (Nevertheless, six craft unions turned down the Great Northern offer last week and the paperworkers are expected to reject the offer later this week, Mr. Hebert said. But negotiations will continue.)

Mr. Hebert contends that Boise "used flexibility as a cover-up to take away the benefits of the people."

"If it was just a question of flexibility I think it could have been settled (before the strike). In my 26 years of negotiating in the state of Maine... I'd swear the company was looking for a strike. Flexibility was just a big cover-up."

A local union official concurred: "They're a bad company to work for. I never saw a company do things like that."

The man who calls the shots at Boise—mill manager Doug Daniels—blamed the union for misleading its members into believing the company would make a better offer than the final offer, thus provoking and prolonging the strike. "We have

Electricians also sign

The electricians at the Boise mill approved their contract Saturday in what the union president described as a "fairly close" vote.

Local President Jerome Kidder, of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, declined to give the exact count but said the vote was, "closer than I thought it would be." About 50 members of the 60-member local took part in the voting.

The electricians' contract expired July 31, and while they never took a strike vote, they declined to cross paperworkers' picket lines after voting down the new contract. While off the job, many of the electricians had been doing contract work at Great Northern and at S.D. Warren. Boise, meanwhile, had contracted out the electrical maintenance work.

Mr. Kidder said the membership did not want to vote for the contract but had no way out since Boise was threatening to permanently contract out the electrical work. "It was more or less voted under duress. We didn't have much choice in the matter," he said.

342 people who are not working today because they listened to the union."

Speaking before the Bethel Rotary Club yesterday (Tuesday), Mr. Daniels said it was a shame the union did not believe the company that there would be no changes in the final offer. He said, "This strike occurred in 1986 because in 1980 we made a change (in the contract offer)."

He stressed that the company absolutely wanted a contract that afforded it the flexibility to assign workers to various jobs in the mill, but denied that the company was trying to eliminate workers' benefits. "In the past four or five years the place has not made an acceptable profit, (but) we're not trying to make an acceptable profit by taking it out of the hides of our workers," he said. The average wage in the mill is over $12 an hour. The new contract provides for yearly increases plus a $1,000 signing bonus.

Mr. Daniels said flexibility in job assignments will also be a benefit to worker morale. He said the routinization of the job under the former work rules led to drinking, drug use and low self-esteem among the workers. "There was misery in that mill," he said. His goal is, "To create an environment where people can be successful."

As for the healing process that must now ensue in the mill between the former strikers and management and the former strikers and the replacement workers, Mr. Daniels acknowledged, "We recognize there's a great deal of anger that has to be vented. I've got a lot of anger of my own."

He warned, however, that intimidation and harassment of replacement workers would not be an acceptable venting of anger. "I will not tolerate it," he said.

Waterfront residents meeting to organize G'stock lakes association

Twenty-five interested people met at the Woodstock town hall on Aug. 23 to discuss organizing a Greenwood/Woodstock lakes association.

Mrs. Winona Chase, from the Norway Lakes Association, was very helpful in her explanations of the purpose, organizational structure and conservation activities of their group.

It was decided by those present to meet again Sept. 20, at 10 a.m., at the Woodstock town hall. The intention of the group is to elect a board of directors, with at least two representatives from each of the ponds and lakes in the two towns and to elect officers.

Scott Williams, biologist and water-tester for Norway and other lakes associations, will be at the meeting. Any person interested in maintaining and/or improving the quality of local lakes and ponds is invited to attend this meeting.

DAIRYMAN QUITTING

prices. Critics of the program say other producers will step in to keep the supply of milk about the same.

Regardless of the national arguments pro and con, Ole Olson is taking advantage of the offer. He has already begun selling his herd, which is now down to 65, from 73 a few months ago. The cows will be completely sold by the end of next August.

In addition to the money he receives for his animals, the government will pay him $14 for each 100 pounds of milk he would have produced in one year. He figures this will give him a bonus of $30,000.

By the terms of the agreement, he must get rid of every animal in his dairy herd and cannot purchase or keep a milk cow for five years. "I can't even have one for my coffee," he explained.

Mr. Olson is not ready to get out of farming altogether, however. He plans to continue haying, on his own fields—which comprise half of his 150-acre farm—and on neighbors' fields. And he plans to raise some beef cattle. He is already pasturing 11 Herefords.

He doesn't know how he'll enjoy beef cattle. Gone will be the 4:30 a.m. mornings in the milking barn, with the gentle-eyed Jerseys munching their fresh feed while the farmer and his assistant milk them and cats roam around looking for spilled drops of warm milk. He says, however, he still plans to get up at 4:30.

And he still plans to continue logging in his woodlot with 18-year-old "Nancy," the 245-pound Nancy (whom he raised from a colt) won her class at the just-concluded Oxford County Fair.

He says of the still-frisky horse's love of logging: "She enjoys it more than I do."

Upton wins state award for annual town report

The Town of Upton has won a Superior award from the Maine Municipal Association for this year's town report.

Annual reports from 27 Maine municipalities were awarded certificates of merit in three levels of achievement: Supreme Merit, Superior, and Excellence. There were six towns in the state achieving Supreme Merit, eight achieving Superior, and 13 achieving Excellence.

Upton's town report was prepared by town officials and printed by Citizen Press.

Craft offerings in adult education

Cathy Newell, director of SAD #44 Adult and Community Education, has announced an array of craft courses designed to provide adults with an opportunity to learn new skills which expand creativity and provide students with the chance to explore crafts which often lead to professional growth. "Over the years," stated Mrs. Newell, "there have been some really amazing results from some of our craft classes. Eric Paul of Groan and McGurn, a screenprinting business in West Bethel, found the inspiration and practical knowledge for his business in a class offered by Dave Tripp. Lucy Rogers' handspinning business got its start in a class offered by Betsy Gray Bell, who lived in Andover in the 1970s. And Robin Fraser has gone on from Bob Grover's stained glass classes to produce products for sale and to teach others in the SAD #44 program. Of course, there is no way to measure the many individual accomplishments which include products made for gifts and for home, feelings of increased confidence from learning something new, and the enjoyment of working on projects as a group."

Quitting classes lead off the SAD #44 line-up with Susan Harvey returning to the program with a new course, Christmas Quilting Projects, which will allow those at the beginner level to learn quilting techniques through work on a pieced Christmas tree, a star pillow top, and small ornaments. Catherine Calf will again teach advanced classes in Bethel and Andover, with the Bethel class designing and making advanced level quilts and the Andover group selection projects of individual interest. Donna McCarraher of Waterford is new to the SAD #44 program but many will remember her from her former fabric shop in Norway. Ms. McCarraher will offer a new class, Machine Quilting, for those who do not have the time or patience to devote to hand piecing. A complete quilt will be made by each student in 10-12 hours.

Jan Todd, a popular member of the SAD #44 Adult and Community Education staff, will teach a mini-class of 3 sessions in Basketry. The class will learn residents applied for the seats: John Elliot, Sandy Mahon, Diana Walker and Joan Scaro. The board wanted to wait until after the police protection question is decided by voters before making any new appointments to the committee concerned.

The board awarded Ripley & Fletcher Co. the contract for supplying fuel oil to the town. The bid prices—$.547 for #1 fuel oil and $.48 for #2 fuel oil—were about the same as those bid by John P. Cullinan, but the service charge was lower and the parts discount greater.

The board awarded the town contract for regular gas to Cullinan, for a bid of $.62/gallon.

The board held off on awarding a contract for lead-free gasoline. The only bid was from Ripley & Fletcher.

The board granted permission to Cotel for burying cables on the Flat Road, in West Bethel.

The board awarded Peter Kuzyk a contract for exterior repairs on the Cole Block. The bid price was $850.

The selectmen signed a consent agreement with the state Department of Environmental Protection to make improvements at the landfill to prevent pollution of the Androscoggin River.

basketry techniques by making an egg basket. Jan Todd will also teach Tole Painting later in the fall, and Joyce Frazier will teach Tole Painting in Andover as well. A Crafts Workshop is a new offering in Andover, featuring a variety of craft products taught by Brenda McCarthy and Debbie Cayer. Rub-out plaques, salt-dough, and stenciling will be among the techniques used. Holiday Crafts, including the Halloween, Thanksgiving and Christmas items, will be the subject of a morning class taught by West Bethel's Sheila Head at her home.

Rug Braiding, taught by Virginia Daigle; Tackmaking, featuring stuffed toys with Julie Daye; Machine Embroidery with Rachel MacKay; Stained Glass with Robin Fraser; and Knitting with Amy Farrar, are all traditional favorites which will be offered again this fall. New offerings include Crochet with Marlene Marshall, and Jewelry-making with James Owen of Gould Academy.

WEST PARIS PROTESTS

Meanwhile, the selectmen have sent a letter to the state banking commission protesting the closing and have asked the Federal Home Loan Bank Board to extend the commenting period on the bank's decision to move. The board must approve the move.

Mrs. McLaughlin said, "If the bank does leave, we'll actively seek another bank (for the town). It wouldn't be helpful to our town to be without a bank," she said.

The Savings Bank has meanwhile worked out a lease on the former Texaco station land next to Hancock Lumber, on Rte. 26, in South Paris. The bank will lease the property from John Schiavi and hopes to open a branch there next spring.

The Bethel Savings Bank FSB is an independent mutual savings bank owned by its depositors and insured by the FDIC. It currently has assets of $46,000,000.

West Paris
By VIVA WHITMAN

Last week sure was busy for a few days going to doctors as I went to Portland, North Bridgton and Bridgton Hospital for tests. It is always a waiting game when one goes to the doctors, but we expect that so aren't disappointed.

It's cloudy here this morning but looks better than yesterday. Humidity is up as my muscles are telling me but hope the sun gets around to shine just the same.

When I got home from Bridgton last Friday, my foster daughter Helen Strout from Oxford was just leaving and seeing us come, she came back and visited for awhile. I was glad to see her and have a chance to talk with her.

Russell and I did some house cleaning on Saturday after going to town in the morning for groceries and doing some washing. Didn't know as it would dry but it did. After lunch, we tackled a job that we had been dreading and putting off but Russell needed some lumber to build a box so we opened up under the mobile home and he crawled in and threw out stuff to me to stack for him. We had had things pretty well organized until they came last year and did some work insulating and put down plastic under the home for a vapor barrier. They had thrown the lumber all over toward the front of the home where Russell couldn't reach it so we have it all on the back side of the home now and hope to be able to find what we want, when we want it.

As Sunday was grandparents day, Helen came and took me to my daughter's home in Lewiston where we had a nice lunch and visit. I stayed to care for the girls for a couple of nights as the girl they thought was coming to babysit didn't show up and had cancelled out on them. No good reason, but it left them in the lurch so Grandma came to the rescue.

Nonie took me to see my doctor on Monday for my weekly visit as long as I was down there. That was part of the bargain when I went to help her with the girls.

Tuesday was a busy day, also. We took Courtney to nursery school in the morning and she loves to go. Nonie then took me shopping for a few items I wanted to get and can't seem to find around here but some of them I didn't find there, either. Anyway, we shopped till it was time to go get Courtney from school and then went out for lunch. We had a nice lunch and then home to put the girls down for naps. They were both tired and didn't take long in going to sleep. Wynona had paper work to do, so I rested also. Had been awake most of the night before and needed a nap worse than the girls did. Classes have started for Nonie at adult education at Auburn and she is a busy gal. As director she has many duties to perform and also teaches one night a week. Came home Wednesday morning and did a little cooking for Russell and was here to get his lunch. There is always something to do.

My flower garden of African violets needed attention so Thursday morning was spent in caring for them. Still have some to re-pot but don't know where I will find room to put them. They grow too well in the big bow window, I guess. However, they are pretty and as I can't have smelling flowers, I enjoy the violets very much. They bloom so well for me and I have good luck starting plants from leaves.

Went to the garden after lunch to help Russell pick the string beans and got a few beets to cook for our own use. They are always so good right from the garden, but I don't expect to have too many to can without buying some. Sweet corn has been doing well so have had some of that and Russell brought in some squash to use. Much better than frozen squash even though that is good. Got to pick carrots and put some up for our use this winter. With the price of groceries one has to help themselves all they can.

It is certainly starting to look fallish now with some of the leaves turning color. They are so pretty but I always dread what comes next. We are still hoping the second planting of peas will give us some to freeze. They are blossoming and unless we get a bad frost, we still have hopes.

I was sorry to hear about the early frost taking many vegetables from folks' gardens but we can't change Mother Nature and she does what she wants to do. We were lucky and didn't get a frost here at all. Some of the leaves are turning on some of the vegetables but that is to be expected this time of year. They can't last forever even if we would like them to.

Haven't been to Oxford fair and don't expect to get there but imagine the 4-H children are there with livestock and lots of other exhibits. 4-H is good for youngsters and helps teach them responsibility. I know I enjoyed the progress the children made when I was a leader. It is a great organization for children to join.

Don't forget the dance at West Paris Grange Hall Sept. 20. It will be good like the others have been and with refreshments on sale downstairs for folks to enjoy. Richard Felt and friends will play the kind of music to make your toes tap and if you can't dance but like good old-fashioned music and to watch the older dances as well as some of the newer ones, go to the dance and have a good time. The money is to go toward the chairlift fund. Thanks to many people for the help with papers, donations and many other things. The Grangers all appreciate the help and are looking forward to the time

Sixty-nine Bethel Senior Citizens met Sept. 10 at the Rumford Point Church for a delicious chicken pie dinner followed by apple pie and cheese and a beautiful birthday cake by Leona Flint. President Virginia Walker conducted the meeting and the usual reports were read and accepted.

Celebrating birthdays this month are: Leah Witter, Polly Shatney, Emily Saunders, Avis Dooen, Alfred Brown, Phillip Faudi, and Jo Tripp. Plans for the foliage trip were discussed after a report on the successful boat ride on the "Mt. Washington." A beautiful day was enjoyed by 40. The trip to Rangeley will be on Thursday, Oct. 2. Please call Joanne Coolidge, 824-2575, for more information and to sign up.

Polly Shatney announced that a food sale will be held at 9 a.m. on Friday, Sept. 26 at the IGA Store. Coastal Management has announced that there is one apartment available at the Bethel House.

Guests present were Edith Milligan of Rumford Corner and Ann Troy, Gore Road, Bryant Pond.

Margaret Joy Tibbetts gave a lively and much appreciated account of her trip to Russia following the dinner.

The next meeting will be Oct. 8 at the Congregational Church and will include a fashion show.

West Paris

By MIRIAM INMAN

On Sept. 2, the West Paris Senior Citizens met at the Legion Hall for a potluck dinner and meeting. Avis Ellingwood asked the blessing. The tables were attractively decorated with fall flowers. There were 29 in attendance. Elizabeth Rowe, president, opened the business meeting by having all repeat the Lord's Prayer and the flag salute. She welcomed all present, including two new members, Orin Noble and Merrill Ridley from Chapel Valley.

Mary Gillies, from Gillies Realty, Bethel, explained about buying and selling real estate. Also Gloria Sawyer, the Outreach Worker from W.O.C.C., explained the services available for older citizens, such as legal services, tax and rent refunds, living wills and the newspaper, Elder Advocate, etc.

Greenwood City

By COLISTA MORGAN

The color comes now day by day. There are other changes also—the autumn flowers. If we could believe it; it's another spring, starting at the roadsides. Bouncing Bet has its special bloom of pink and white. Queen-Ann's-Lace is beginning to be worn and faded. Goldenrod is at its peak while the many varieties of asters stand tall and proud.

When September brings us temperatures in the low forties and misty dawns which by afternoon go, we know these are a few harbingers of fall. The wind rustles the leaves in the tree tops and carries thistledown across the valley. I have seen these things. Scattered bursts of flame appear in the sumac which is trying to match the maple and woodbine.

The walks have been brief, but just beyond the doorstep there are new dimensions and they can be felt. Nothing hurries, not even you. I'm enjoying these for one day very soon I am to have eye surgery. Hopefully I'll be able to see and do more. As of now I'm still lost.

It is pleasant to walk on the mossy trails through the woods—sometimes along a shady brook, sometimes beside a stone wall, where chipmunks dive into the rocks, sometimes skirting a field. The least valuable land to some is the most valuable to those who like nature. I usually take my time, stopping to examine beautiful mosses or pausing at wide carpets of pine needles. I can remember going among immense and weathered boulders that had lain there since the last Ice Age.

We are always free to enjoy all the adventures that lie along bordering paths of our valley and some day I'll go again.

The Milton Inmans have moved back home to West Paris after their summer at Maplewood.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Curtis were in Lewiston on Monday to see Fred's doctor.

My callers have been Doris Munn, Harrison; Mrs. Gladys Millett, Mr. and Mrs. Nolan Avery of Pittsfield, N.H.; Evelyn Tamminen, Yarmouth; Mr. and Mrs. Milton Inman, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Curtis, Zilpha DiArenzo, Mr. and Mrs. John Betts, local; Ann Holl, Bethel; Everett Curtis, Poland.

The Tuesday Club went out for lunch on Wednesday.

Lenora Waterhouse, Verna Libby, Falmouth, visited their sister Doris Hayes for a few days this week.

Fay Holt left for a three day vacation to the coast with Eldith Lang on Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. John Betts took me to Portland this week to see my eye doctor.

Katherine Hakala is home from her trip to Washington state to see her sister.

Agnes Gray School

By MARTA CLEMENTS

The first two weeks of school have flown by. The fifth graders have seen a caterpillar change into a chrysalis which is always an exciting moment. Now we are waiting to see our first butterfly emerge. The Oxford Hills Athletic Boosters are sponsoring flag football for the elementary students. Consequently there is a lot of football going on at recesses.

Greg Grigsby, the home/school counselor, has been visiting each classroom to let students know about the different activities that he will have available to students. Children will be able to sign up for group activities which are designed to improve self-esteem and build skills to prevent and/or solve problems. Mr. Grigsby also has contact with individual student and with parents.

We are in the process of organizing our volunteer program. Several friends of education have already volunteered. We are planning to initiate a support group to help volunteers know what is expected of them, to address concerns and to show our appreciation for all their efforts. Mrs. Debbie Small, parent, and Mrs. Judith Loper, teacher, are going to a training session organized by the Maine State Coordinator for Volunteers in the Public Schools. The workshop will be held in Gorham, Maine on Sept. 15 and will be led by Ms. Heidi McGinley. There will be two programs offered entitled Recruiting School Volunteers and Training for Volunteer Coordinators.

We are continuing to utilize our "ticket system" for dealing with inappropriate behavior. We feel this is a positive approach to discipline despite the negative aspect of tickets and detention! Years ago when we began this program it was a joint effort between faculty and students. Both listed offenses that warranted immediate action. These offenses are grouped according to their seriousness and are assessed a point value of from 1 to 3 points. Fighting is an automatic 3 point ticket with a copy given to the student and one filed at the office. One point can be worked off for each ½ days that is ticket free. The last thing Friday afternoon there is an activity or detention period. The activity is for the students who have received no tickets or who have worked off acquired tickets. Otherwise, the time is spent in detention. Parents receive notification of the detention and reasons for it, which they must sign and return to school. If a student spending too many Fridays in detention a conference will be requested. This program is successful for several reasons: The students feel something is being done when misbehavior occurs. Students have a strong sense of fairness and they feel this approach is fair. The punishments

By EVELINE B. VATCHER

West Paris Grange will be sponsoring a chemical free dance Saturday evening, Sept. 20, from 8 to 12 at the hall. Richard Felt and company will supply the music.

Eveline Vatcher was at her doctor's in Bethel Monday for two allergy shots. Congratulations are extended to Jeri Brooks, Bethel, on her installation as Eastern Division Vice President of the American Legion Auxiliary at the National Convention in Cincinnati, Ohio, on Sept. 4.

A heavy frost here Sept. 9 finished off the gardens. Several people hadn't even had one ear of corn. Better luck next year. Joe Vatcher picked two tomatoes that had started to turn color and the back sides were all rotten. Oh! Well.

Callers at Lawrences: Mr. and Mrs. Albert Penley Sr.; Mr. and Mrs. Norman Abbott, Mexico; James (Buddy) Goff of Lancaster, Calif.; Mr. and Mrs. Joe Vatcher, Mr. and Mrs. Cleon Pinkham, Arnold Coffin, Mr. and Mrs. Odell Heath, Margaret Stevens and Ryan Dillingham, Mr. and Mrs. Herman Card, Rhoda Labbe.

Mr. and Mrs. Joe Vatcher went to Cape Cod, Mass., Sept. 15 for several days in observance of their fifth wedding anniversary which falls on Sept. 19. They went a bit early to avoid the weekend traffic. Do you suppose they will catch a glimpse of the Kennedy clan?

Mr. and Mrs. Harlan Abbott hosted the Abbott reunion Sept. 14, at their home. Arnold Coffin, Doris and Cleon Pinkham had supper with the Joe Vachers Sept. 12. The Pinkhams planned to return to Phoenix, Ariz., Monday, Sept. 15.

Notes from the Woodstock Historical Society

Here is a humorous piece from some of Ruby Emery's notebooks—

A Farmer's Love Letter
My Darling Sweet Potato,
Do you carrot all for me? My heart beats for you and love is soft as squash. I am for you strong as an onion. You are a peach with your radish hair and turnip nose. You are the apple of my eye, so if we cantalope then lettuce be married at home for I know we will make a happy pear.

Ed Quinn donated to the museum a block of granite originally from the quarry in Bryant Pond and used in grand Trunk Station in Portland.

Francis Brooks donated a straight razor to the museum.

Remember to visit the museum, 1-4 p.m. on Saturday, "The Past is Always Present" at the Woodstock Museum.

Did you know that...

Andover

East Andover

By LAURA HUTCHINS

Another week gone and the tree are putting on their fall colors more every day. Many are losing their leaves in the brisk winds that we have had this week.

On Sunday, Sept. 7, Bernard and I drove to West Paris. There we joined my brother Lawrence, my nephew Alvin and his daughter, Misty and went to Boothbay Harbor, where we enjoyed another day of deep sea fishing. We brought back cod, cusk and ocean perch. It was a beautiful day again. We sighted whale, many seals, and on our return a school of porpoises appeared along one side and across the rear of the boat, diving, then leaping out of the water and followed for a short distance, then disappeared. When I asked Misty what she thought about the trip, in general, she said, "Oh this is better than Sea World!" One lady caught a 31 pound pollack and got so excited we thought she was going overboard.

Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Jones, East Andover, visited their daughter, Laura Plawlock, Joshua and Sara, in Bethel, on Tuesday night and enjoyed supper with them in honor of Joshua's birthday.

Mrs. Lorena Simmons, Andover, struck a moose on Route 5 on Monday near the home of Kenneth Fields. It broke the grill on her car and there was some other damage to the car, but the moose was unharmed, as was Lorena.

Miss Josephine Poor, Andover, recently became a resident at the Clover Living Center in Auburn. Rev. Marjorie Churchill visited her there this week and stated that she seems quite happy there.

Maurice Palmer, Andover, is a patient at Stephens Memorial Hospital in Norway.

Fonnie Hall is a patient at Rumford Community Hospital, as of last Monday.

Miss Dorothy Lang, Andover, returned to her home this week after being a surgical patient at Rumford Community Hospital.

Basil Hutchins, East Andover, is a patient at Rumford Community Hospital at this writing. Bernard and I visited him and he was feeling better.

On Tuesday evening the East Andover Community Club members motored to Norway for their annual fall "supper out" and social gathering at one of the restaurants. It is reported they had a very enjoyable time and good food.

Wednesday, Sept. 10, seven Ladies Aid Society members motored to Weld and joined Gertrude Perceval at her camp there, for a nice potluck luncheon, meeting and social time. Despite the brisk breeze, two members enjoyed a swim in the lake. On our way there, one

Tri-Town Rescue

Tri-Town Rescue sent in the Community Birthday Calendar this week. Thanks to everyone's help, the sales went very well. Over 400 calendars were ordered. Nearly 2,000 listings were included in this year's order. Last year the names were typed into a computer, which saved a lot of time this year.

Congratulations to Diane Todd, an attendant who just got a job with Oxford Bank as a receptionist.

A two credit case review is offered Sept. 24 at Stephens Memorial Hospital at 7 p.m. on mechanisms of injury. The course is limited to 30 so see Mary Emery for registration information.

The auxiliary is taking a break in September from the busy fund-raising schedule. Plans for October include a dance by Northern Atlantic Oct. 11. The group will also sponsor a supper prior to the Old Parisians Dance Oct. 18 in West Paris.

carload saw a cow moose cross the road (and had to stop for her) and the other carload saw a huge bull moose cross the road in front of them. Those attending were: Dorothy Campbell and Phyllis Farrar, South Andover; Rev. Marjorie Churchill, Andover; Dolly Jones and Laura Hutchins; Alice Ramey and Vera Thompson of Rumford Center.

On Thursday, Sept. 11, I drove to Ashland, N.H. and had a nice visit with my step-daughter, Joan King. We enjoyed a drive through some pretty country up there, and went shopping. Weatherwise, it was a strange day, hot, humid, dark and hazy, but the trees, when you could see them, were beautiful. There were still many boats in Squam Lake and in Meredith, N.H., the harbor was full of boats of many descriptions. A lovely, peaceful scene!

By GLADYS KILGORE

Donald Plummer and family, also his mother Mrs. Gladys Plummer, went to Berlin Saturday.

Our summer friends are closing their homes and camps and starting for warmer climates.

Several from here attended the service in honor of Willard Bicket at the Lovell church.

Mrs. Gladys Plummer is being visited by her sister of Berlin. She goes to Florida winters.

Mrs. Nancy Bryant and Mrs. Cindy Hayes have been doing some work for Grace Nelson.

Mrs. Thelma Dammun has closed her home for a few weeks and gone to Lovell to work for a lady who lives alone there.

Much sympathy is extended to the Rugg family who have lost their loved one. He passed away Sunday morning, Sept. 7.

Mrs. Geneva Tripp took me to see my doctor in Harrison Tuesday.

Mrs. Isma Bachelder of Florida is visiting her sister Sarah Grover and other relatives and friends while here.

Robert and Frances Grant were entertained Saturday, Sept. 6, honoring their 25th anniversary at a small family dinner at the Kezar Lake Grange Hall, North Lovell. They received many nice gifts and cards and a decorated cake for the occasion. Those attending were: Mr. and Mrs. Albert Nelson, Sr.; Mrs. Sharon Nelson, Eric and Troy; Mr. and Mrs. Dale Nelson, Molly and Matthew; Mrs. Wilma Taylor, Mrs. Sally Graves, Mrs. Grace Nelson, Mrs. Gladys Kilgore; Donald Files of Melrose, Mass.; and Shirley Grant of Lisbon. Several others were unable to attend on account of illness.

The advanced first aid course will start with the CPR and continue Thursday nights through the first of December, with a few Tuesday nights to complete the 80-hour course prior to Christmas.

The courses will be completed in time for ski patrol members who want the training.

For those interested in becoming ambulance attendants, a special session in oxygen therapy will be offered at the end of the first aid class. The course will prepare students to take the state licensing test for ambulance attendants for those interested in joining a service.

For more information or to register for the course, call Chris Healey (665-2853).

The first meeting of the Concerned Women for America, Action Chapter, will be at the home of Mrs. Ernest Bolio, Rte. 232, Bryant Pond, on Sept. 24, at 1 p.m.

The organizers say all those concerned for this country's future and those who want to protect traditional values should join the Action Chapter. No fee is required.

Like other Action Chapters across the country, this chapter will focus on knowing the issues—family, moral and political—and how they affect our lives and what we can do about them, the organizers say.

The first meeting of the Concerned Women for America, Action Chapter, will be at the home of Mrs. Ernest Bolio, Rte. 232, Bryant Pond, on Sept. 24, at 1 p.m.

The organizers say all those concerned for this country's future and those who want to protect traditional values should join the Action Chapter. No fee is required.

Like other Action Chapters across the country, this chapter will focus on knowing the issues—family, moral and political—and how they affect our lives and what we can do about them, the organizers say.

Andover school news

The Early Preventing of School Failure screening of kindergarten students was held in Andover on Sept. 10. The purpose of the screening was to determine the developmental levels of the students' skills needed for reading and writing success. Following the screening, programs will be set up to correlate with the children's developmental skill levels.

The fourth annual toad contest, under the direction of 6th-grade teacher Roger Sabin was recently held. Sixth-graders Andrew Hutchins and Nathan Emery were the scale tenders. Nathan won the contest with a toad weighing in at 132 grams. Andy was second with a 118-gram toad, while close behind was first-grader Karen Thurston, with a toad weighing 115 grams.

Twenty-three students participated from grades K-6. The winning toad gets to spend the winter in an aquarium with food and heat. Lucky toad!

In an effort to protect the students, parents of school children are asked to call the school if their child is going to be absent. In this way, school authorities can account for each child at the beginning of each school day.

The library at AES is now located downstairs beside the art room. The old library has now become a computer room, complete with tables, storage and ample space for a group to work comfortably.

The school's 2nd-graders celebrated the new school year with a New Year's Party. Party hats, balloons, special treats and a parade were enjoyed by all.

Fifth graders constructed a giant bulletin board with a collection of things that help them get to know one another. Each child has brought in things that mean something to him or her. These have been taped, stapled or hung from their own section of the bulletin board.

In math, the fifth-graders are reviewing addition and subtraction skills. They are also practicing multiplication facts. In language, this class is studying the parts of a dictionary, and subjects and predicates. In science the students are classifying organisms. There are two new students: Angela Cuff and Fletcher Wyman.

The first-graders made "stone soup" for lunch last Friday. Stone soup is a sharing soup. Everyone brought something in to add to the soup.

Andover's soccer season has started and the team is ready to play for victory. The game schedule has not yet been set.

Notes from Adult & Community Education

During the first week of registration for SAD #44 Adult and Community Education fall classes, 300 registrations were received. Registrations will be accepted during the week of Sept. 15, and up to the start of a class. Those interested in enrolling in a class are urged to enroll prior to the start of the class so that they will not be disappointed in finding the class filled. At this point most of the fall classes have openings. Director Cathy Newell announced that it is possible to schedule additional classes open request, and encouraged anyone with program suggestions to contact her at the SAD #44 Adult and Community Education office, 824-2780.

The SAD #44 Adult and Community Education staff enjoyed the remarks of Viva Whitman, Citizen correspondent from High Street (West Paris), on the subject of adult education. Mrs. Whitman's daughter, Wynona Wolfe, is the adult education director for the Auburn school system. "The excitement of graduation is as good for an older person as a young person, maybe more, as their family joins in to help them celebrate their success," Mrs. Whitman's personal recommendation based on her own adult education experience was great and reminded the staff at SAD #44 of the good feelings engendered by the graduation in May, which somehow got on the back burner during the hectic fall start-up of classes. Anyone who would like to be part of the graduating class of 1987 should contact the Adult and Community Education office to enroll in fall classes or GED preparation process. Call 824-2780 during the day or Cathy Newell, 824-2088 in the evening.

Anyone who is interested in individual piano lessons should call the Adult and Community Education office. Both Susan Davis and Mary Valentine have indicated that they would be willing to teach this year. Lessons are scheduled at Telstar during after-school hours.

There will be a Maine State Library course entitled Introduction to Reference Services taught by Mary Valentine on Monday afternoons starting Oct. 6. This should be of special interest to those who work in school or town libraries. Application forms are available at the SAD #44 Adult and Community Education office.

The Ballroom Dancing class has received sufficient interest to be scheduled. Susan Farrar will teach the class on Thursday evenings from 7-8 at the studio

By OLIVE DAVIS

Esther Davis was in Livermore Saturday, where she attended a bridal shower given to her nephew, Phillip Pike's bride-to-be. When she came home, she called on her niece, Ethel. She had the misfortune to fall backward down stairs. They rushed her to the hospital where she remained overnight. She was home Sunday. She hurt her head and elbow the most but says she is all right.

Buster and Charibel Poland had a big sale at the community house this week. Felix Otero-Otero's crew have finished my house this week. It looks beautiful. It has been a hard year for painters because of the rain and outdoor jobs need to have reasonably dry weather.

Ray Miclon and family have been working hard at their house in Buckfield. They hope to be able to live there soon. Frank Knox has finished fixing my clothesline and has done several odd jobs that needed to be done in the two houses. I surely appreciate his help.

Ellsworth Hathaway is painting his barn. Mr. and Mrs. Leon Poland Jr. were in Florida last week where they attended the wedding of their daughter Lailani. They returned Saturday.

MR. GOODWRENCH IN ALBANY

Albert White, of Albany, has received General Motors' certification as "Master Technician," officials at Carrick Motors, in Oxford, reported this week.

Mr. White is among nearly 2,400 top service technicians cited by GM across the country. To earn the "Masters" designation, technicians have to demonstrate their expertise through a series of qualifiers as well as participate in special training sessions.

"There are more than 100,000 service technicians in GM dealerships today," noted Win Carrick, of Carrick Motors, "and to be in the top of this group demands that one be constantly up-to-date on product developments and the complexity of today's new cars and trucks."

"This is the second year Mr. White has achieved the 'Master Technician' award."

Bethel will start Sept. 29 not Sept. 22 and will last one hour not three as printed in the flyer.

Rotary Club notes

The Bethel Rotary Club held its regular luncheon meeting at the Sudbury Inn at noon on Tuesday, Sept. 16.

Visiting Rotarians and guests: Bill Lowther, our summer chaplain, Boonton, N.J.; Chas. Feld, Marco Island, Fla.; Bob Wise and Ben Grace, Thomasville, Ga.; Frank Clark, Top O'Pocono, Pa., and George Muelen, New York, N.Y.

At this meeting, President Dave asked that the board of directors meet in special session after the meeting to select a place for the new breakfast meeting of the club. Cheri Thurston, gracious luncheon sponsor these many years, had advised the House Committee that the Sudbury Inn can not accommodate a breakfast meeting for several logical reasons. She will continue to support Rotary if the need to serve should arise. The Bethel club is grateful for the catered service it has enjoyed and extends its thanks.

For the information of Rotarians unable to attend the annual Oxford Hills fall cookout at Glenn Huntley's in Hebron, the event was a great one. A special thank you to the Oxford Hills Rotary Club. More inter-club social activity would be most desirable. How about it? Any suggestions? Let President Dave know your feelings.

Raffle specialist Bruce Powell, solicited a new winner at this meeting. Bob Wise, our Georgia guest, walked away with the prize, and promptly donated his winnings to the club.

John Elliot has firm plans for the pancake breakfast to be served at the Gould Academy dining room on Sunday, Nov. 23, with serving between 8 a.m. and 12 noon.

The program chairman at this meeting was Bill Clough. His speakers were Doug Daniels and Gary Guimond, personnel specialists/managers at Boise Cascade in Rumford. The materials talked about gave Rotarians an insight into contract negotiations and a background review of the establishment and development of this paper mill.

At the special meeting of the board of directors held following the luncheon meeting, it was decided that Martha's Restaurant will cater to our requirements effective Oct. 14.

SKIWAY MAILS BROCHURES

Last week Sunday River went nationwide in its marketing effort by mailing over 8,200 brochures to skiers and condominium owners in all 50 states, as well as to skiers in Puerto Rico, Canada, Colombia, West Germany and the Bahamas.

The 20-page brochure serves as an informational guide to the Ski Resort as well as a dining and lodging guide for the Bethel resort community. Copies may be obtained by stopping by the Sunday River offices or by calling 824-2187.

Planning Board wants more details on plan of Eden Ridge subdivision

The Bethel Planning Board, at its regular meeting last Wednesday night, told the developers of the planned Eden Ridge subdivision that a bit more information is needed on the otherwise-complete submission of plans.

Still needed is additional information regarding utility easements and locations, a soil and drainage erosion plan and an outline plan of the individual lots. "It's really in their ballpark for the moment," said Planning Board Chairman John Gray, commenting on any further action by the board to move ahead on the developers' permit request for the Eden Ridge subdivision.

The planned subdivision will sit on a nine-acre tract between Eden Lane and Vernon Street. It will hold 52 units in eight buildings.

Once the additional materials have been submitted, the Planning Board will further discuss the permit request and will then submit it for a public hearing, Mr. Gray said.

Lakefront subdivision planned for South Pond

A plan to subdivide 318 acres, between Lake Road in Woodstock and Rowe Hill Road in Greenwood, into 53 houselots was discussed by the Greenwood Planning Board at their meeting Monday night.

The developer, William F. Glad, of California, envisions a subdivision of single-family homes with common use of Abbott's Anchorage. Twelve lots in the subdivision—to be called South Pond Shores—would have actual frontage on the lake.

The houselots would be from five to eight acres and would be restricted to single-family homes (no mobile homes) with a minimum size of 1,000 square feet. The buyers of the lots would be prohibited from further subdividing them.

The Planning Board is at present considering only phase one of the project, which involves 16 lots. Don Taylor, of Early Real Estate, is acting as agent for the developer and has been reported as saying he expects final board approval for the first phase at the next board meeting, Oct. 6.

The lots with pond frontage are priced at $55,000 to $65,000, while the interior lots carry price tags of $45,000.

NEWS FROM BETHEL AREA

Health Center

The Board of Trustees of the Northern Oxford Health and Service Council announced last week the appointment of William Taylor, M.D., as the new medical director of the Bethel Area Health Center.

Although born and raised in the Midwest, Dr. Taylor has strong ties to Maine. After graduating with a B.S. degree in biochemistry from Michigan State University, in 1974, Dr. Taylor came to Maine, where he spent four years as a teaching and research assistant at the University of Maine at Orono while working toward a doctoral degree in marine biology. It was during this time that Dr. Taylor became interested in pursuing a career as a primary care physician.

He entered medical school in 1979 at the University of Vermont. As a fourth-year medical student, Dr. Taylor spent five months of clinical rotations at Maine Medical Center, in Portland, and six months of elective time in rural primary care practices, in Norway and Strong. During these electives, he met and worked with Tom Whitney, M.D. and Jan Whitworth, P.A., as well as other physicians in the Norway area. Thus, he is already familiar and feels at home in the BAHSC practice as well as in the Norway medical community.

Dr. Taylor completed a three-year residency in family practice in July 1986 from St. Mary's Hospital, in Milwaukee, Wis. A well-rounded family practice program, St. Mary's residency includes a strong emphasis on obstetrics as well as preventive medicine. The health center is pleased that with Dr. Taylor as its primary physician, it will continue to offer an obstetrical practice to the community as well as emphasizing health promotion and disease prevention.

The center had previously announced that Dr. Greg Brown was to be the new medical director. Because of health and personal reasons, Dr. Brown is unable to fulfill this commitment.

Dr. Taylor and his wife Mary are well-acquainted with a rural lifestyle and much prefer it to city life. Mrs. Taylor is from Maine and has family in the Thomaston area. They both enjoy outdoor recreational activities, such as canoeing, camping and skiing. They will be settling into a home in East Bethel and are expecting their first child in December.

NEW DOCTOR IN TOWN: The Bethel Area Health Center's new doctor, Will Taylor (right), visited the new health center facility last week accompanied by his wife, Mary Taylor, who is expecting in December, and health council president John Head.

THIS WEEK AT THE Moses Mason House

The 1986 Endowment Campaign of the Bethel Historical Society made some more progress toward reaching the $8,500 goal before the end of the year. To date over $5,500 has been raised or approximately 65 percent of the goal from 254 contributors. The latest donors include John K. Brown, Bethel, in memory of Carl L. Brown, Ruth Mason Brown, Robert Mason Brown, and Addie Kendall Mason; Lillian K. Bomhoff, Bangor, Pa., in memory of Lilla T. These are available to researchers for use in the Eva Bean Research Room weekdays and by appointment.

A complete set of Bethel town reports is currently being assembled by the society. There are still a number of issues needed. If anyone has the following issues which he or she wishes to donate, it would be greatly appreciated: 1887, 1888, 1889, 1890, 1894, 1895, 1896, 1897, 1899, 1900, 1904, 1911, 1912, and 1935-36. The society is also making collections of town reports for all Oxford County towns. In addition, town reports of the New Hampshire towns of Shelburne, Gorham, Berlin, Chatham and Jefferson are needed as part of the society's White Mountain collection. Anyone able to fill any of
